Carissime Socie e Carissimi Soci

Anzitutto, grazie. Grazie a tutti voi, per aver partecipato così numerosi all'assemblea straordinaria di AIA, e per aver voluto rinnovare la vostra fiducia in noi. Come molti già sapranno, d'intesa con gli amici di Catania, abbiamo preferito rinviare il nostro convegno all'anno prossimo, in modo che AIA30 possa essere davvero una occasione di incontro, un ricominciare che sappia di festa. Conseguentemente, abbiamo anche approvato una proroga al mandato del direttivo. Questa ha di fatto evitato, in prospettiva, complessi (e costosi) sistemi di votazione online, che avrebbero tra l'altro comportato una gestione della privacy dei soci che sarebbe stato difficile garantire con efficacia. Per ri-allinearsi con la tempistica dei convegni ESSE (tipicamente su anni pari), intenderemmo fissare una data per AIA31 nel 2023. La proroga avrà quindi valore per un solo anno: voteremo di nuovo a Catania, per poi ritornare alle urne l'anno successivo, facendo coincidere come di consueto convegni e votazioni.

In realtà questo implica una ulteriore mole di lavoro per alcuni: la nostra vice-Presidente Silvia Bruti, la nostra webmaster e Facebook administrator Silvia Antosa, e il nostro Segretario-Tesoriere Massimo Sturiale, che hanno lavorato davvero molto per gestire i diversi momenti (virtuali e non) della nostra associazione, per tenere i contatti con i soci (e tenerli in maniera concreta, capillare, in questo periodo così complesso!), per consolidare ulteriormente il contatto con le altre associazioni e alcuni importanti atenei del nostro paese. Come si dice, they are going the extra mile for us. A loro va la gratitudine di noi tutti.

A questo proposito, se da un lato il lavoro sulle tabelle è al momento in attesa di validazione (si attendono le nuove indicazioni ministeriali), il lavoro con l'area della "Stranieristica" ha portato i suoi frutti. Assieme alle altre associazioni di Anglistica, e ai colleghi incardinati sui settori disciplinari delle altre lingue/letterature straniere e dell'area filologica, abbiamo contribuito a segnalare prontamente (e a far ritirare) un assurdo comma del bando per la nuova tornata ASN, ove si prevedeva la necessità di traduzione giurata per le pubblicazioni in lingue diverse dall'italiano e inglese. Se ciò può apparire meno rilevante per noi, questo è un segnale di ottima sinergia e di fattiva collaborazione tra tutti.

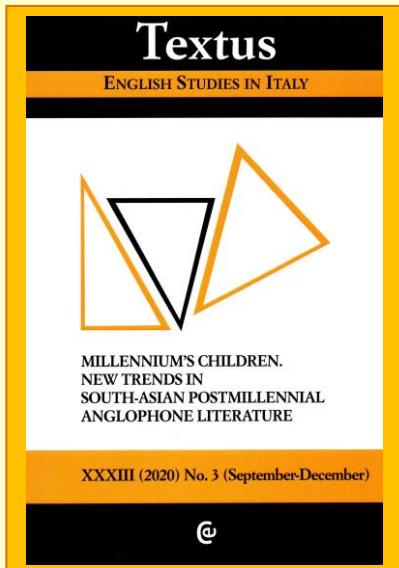

Tante altre iniziative stanno prendendo forma, non ultimi gli appuntamenti dei gruppi di lavoro e molti convegni e seminari e pubblicazioni realizzate dai soci, di cui troverete notizie in queste pagine e, più avanti sul sito e sui nostri social. AIA, insomma è più attiva che mai, pandemia o meno, e la presenza di così tanti di voi, in un clima così amichevole e sereno al nostro appuntamento di marzo, credo ne sia una vivida testimonianza.

Mille auguri di buona Pasqua, carissime e carissimi. E fateci avere vostre nuove.

- un abstract di minimo 500 parole
- nome dell'editor, del guest editor straniero e di un copy editor

Il Direttivo deciderà a chi assegnare la editorship di ciascuno dei tre numeri annuali della rivista, che sono, come da tradizione, uno per Lingua, uno per Cultura e uno per Letteratura.

AIA SEMINAR – 1–2 July, 2021University of Trieste, Dipartimento di Studi Umanistici, DiSU*Call for PapersHos(pi)tes: Hospitality, Hostility and “the Perils of Intimacy” across Cultures

This seminar seeks to explore the theme of hospitality and its correlates of hostility and potentially threatening intimacy from the Renaissance to the present. Hospitality, hostility and intimacy are forms of human experience that are virtually intrinsic to any (representation of) human society, and relevant to the intersection of social and identity formations, migration, and citizenship.

As Émile Benveniste demonstrated, the etymology of hospitality reveals a semantic cluster of concepts that exist in a relation of contiguity and contradiction: host, guest and stranger. In Latin, the guest was both the hospes (guest) and the hostis (enemy). Hence, the intrinsic ambivalent proximity of hospitality and insecurity – what James Heffernan has called “the perils of intimacy” – is a fascinating dimension that affects all levels of social and cultural encounters. The evolution of the concept and the practice of hospitality in its attending dimensions of alterity, hostility, and intimacy deserves further scrutiny in its centrality to any experience of transculturation, social and ethnic mobility across countries in history. Recent studies have focused, alternatively, on the proximity of hospitality and hostility, treachery and intimacy (Heffernan), sympathy (Hollander) security (Clapp and Ridge), and alterity (Mc Nulty, Marais), but the complexity of Western conceptualizations of hospitality still invites a plurality of critical considerations.

The 2020 AIA seminar invites contributions on a range of topics related to the question of hospitality in the English-speaking world from a variety of perspectives including cultural history, cultural studies, literary and language studies.

The call aims at providing a forum for all early career scholars, including Ph.D students, post-doc fellows and researchers (research grant holders, RTD-A and RTD-B). Papers will be circulated in advance to engage the participants in a fruitful exchange and enrich the discussion during panels, and presentations will be limited to approximately 10 minutes – followed by a 30-minute discussion.

The seminar will feature a number of invited speakers from the national research community. A selected number of contributions will be considered for publication.

Suggested topics include, but are not limited to:

- The literary representation of hospitality from Early Modern to contemporary literatures in English: tropes, tradition, subversion.
- Crossing thresholds: the trope of visitation and the vulnerability of the guest/host.
- The circulation and transformations of the idea of hospitality from the Early Modern period to the present.

- Femininity and hospitality: the figure of the hostess and gender alterity.
- Hospitality, hostility in relation to cultural formations across different media.
- The language of hospitality/hostility: from etymological proximity to linguistic forms of mediation and encounter.
- From page to screen: the theme of hospitality in film/tv adaptations.
- After “unconditional hospitality”: contemporary readings after (and beyond) Derrida.

If you wish to participate, please send a 300-word abstract and title, together with a very short bionote, by 30 April 2021 to Roberta Gefter Wondrich (gefter@units.it), Silvia Antosa (silvia.antosa@unikore.it) and Segreteria AIA (aiasegreteria@unict.it).

A preliminary programme and webpage will be available as soon as possible. For any queries and information, please contact Roberta Gefter and Silvia Antosa.

Calls – Pubblicazioni

Linguæ & Rivista di lingue e culture moderne

On Lying

Intuitively, we all know what lying is. However, on a theoretical level, defining its nature and aims has been a core issue in many topical domains of human knowledge. This Call for Papers aims to develop an interdisciplinary discourse on the nature of lying and of phenomena directly or indirectly connected with it, such as deception and self-deception, illusion, forgery, fake news, manipulation of sources, and others. We will welcome contributions from literature and the other arts, philosophy, theology, history, philology, psychology, neurosciences, linguistics, and others. The output of this special issue should be a common core of insights linking the humanities with the social sciences and the ‘natural sciences’ so to enable a full-scope investigation of this fundamental phenomenon, and place it within the larger picture of what it means to be human.

Although we prefer contributions in English, we also accept essays in Italian, French, German and Spanish.

Authors wishing to propose a paper for this special issue should register on the journal web site and upload their papers preferably in English, no later than April 15th, 2021. See Information for Authors (<https://www.ledonline.it/index.php/linguae/information/authors>) and Online submissions (<https://www.ledonline.it/index.php/linguae/about/submissions>).

Only papers which fully comply with the requirements in the “Guidelines” and in the “Authors’ Statement” (the latter’s point 1.a in particular) will be accepted for the double-blind peer review process.

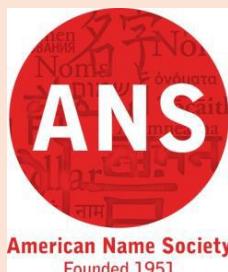

Sulla bugia

Intuitivamente, tutti sappiamo cosa sia una bugia. Ma sul piano teorico, la natura e gli scopi di questo fenomeno sono tuttora oggetto di discussione in molti settori fondamentali del sapere umano. Questo Call for papers mira a sviluppare un discorso interdisciplinare attorno alla natura della bugia e dei fenomeni ad essa direttamente o indirettamente collegati, come l'inganno e l'autoinganno, l'illusione, la falsificazione, le fake news, la manipolazione delle fonti, ed altri. Accoglieremo contributi di letteratura e delle altre arti, filosofia, teologia, storia, filologia, psicologia, neuroscienze, linguistica. Il fine ultimo sarà individuare delle convergenze tra le scienze umanistiche, sociali e naturali che consentano un'investigazione a tutto campo di questo fenomeno fondamentale della natura e dell'esistenza umana.

Nonostante l'uso dell'inglese sia preferibile, la rivista accetta articoli anche in italiano, francese, tedesco e spagnolo.

Si invitano gli autori che desiderano sottoporre i propri contributi, preferibilmente in inglese, a registrarsi sul sito della Rivista e a caricarli entro e non oltre il 15 Aprile 2021. Si vedano la pagina Information for Authors (<https://www.ledonline.it/index.php/linguae/information/authors>), e la sezione Online submissions (<https://www.ledonline.it/index.php/linguae/about/submissions>) che contiene informazioni anche in italiano).

Solo gli articoli che saranno caricati nel sito secondo quanto richiesto dalle “Linee guida per gli Autori” e dalla “Dichiarazione degli Autori” (si veda in particolare il punto 1.a di quest'ultima) saranno avviati al processo di referaggio “double-blind”.

TOPOONYMS AND LITERARYSCAPES

Although toponyms are often taken for granted in our daily lives, they carry considerable potential for acquiring personal and social meanings depending on their contexts and co-texts of use. These multi-layered meanings are often utilized by authors as literary resources for evoking associations or invoking evaluative positioning. Papers accepted for this special issue will explore how the meanings of place-names—be they real or fictional—may be effectively harnessed to shape literary settings within specific works or by specific authors. Examples of themes that can be addressed include—but are not limited to—toponyms choice/invention and their connotations; toponyms in translation; toponyms in literary theory; and toponyms and intertextuality.

Proposal Submission Process:

1. Abstracts proposals (max. 500 words) should be sent as an email attachment (PDF format) to Vice President, Dr. Luisa Caiazzo (luisa.caiazzo@unibas.it). Proposals should include a preliminary list of

2. Proposals should include “NAMES 2021 proposal” in the subject line of the email.
 3. All submissions must include an abstract title, the full name(s) of the author(s), the author(s) affiliation(s), and email address(es) in the body of the email and NOT in the abstract.
 4. DEADLINE: Proposals must be received by 8pm GMT on 15 April 2021. Authors will be notified about the results of the blind review on or by 10 May 2021.

Prospero XXVI – 2021 Call for Papers

The Past Present of Bildung: New Perspectives on and of the Bildungsroman

At a time of unprecedented global precariousness, narratives of self-formation may seem to take on new connotations. At the beginning of the first quarter of the new millennium, it makes sense to revalue the Bildungsroman to reassess the parable, the potential and the possible futures of this crucial “symbolic form” of modernity”, in Franco Moretti’s well-known definition.

Decades after the publication of his seminal The Way of the World: The Bildungsroman in European Culture (1987), recent critical studies on this genre have mainly focussed on the modernist, colonial and postcolonial Bildungsroman, as in the case of Joshua Esty’s important Unseasonable Youth: Modernism, Colonialism and the Fiction of Development (2012). Considerations of this fictional model/genre have further elucidated the idea of the desirable but often incomplete or impossible Bildung that was already implicated by the canonical Bildungsroman, by foregrounding the modernist (and postmodernist) refusal and impossibility of closure as simultaneously determining the very limitedness and unattainability of Bildung. Since Modernism, in fact, “the aspiration toward Bildung (even its failure) becomes an achievement in its own right” (G.Castle). This diminished perspective, in keeping with the downsized mythology and counter-epic strain of Modernist celebration of anonymity, actually opened up a whole gamut of possible paths for what Esty identified as “anti-developmental narratives”, bound for limited, even regressive horizons rather than teleologically socialised and identitarian models.

Since Modernism, moreover, the focus of representation changed from achieving (or having failed to achieve) Bildung to the very aspiration to achieve. Is it possible, then, that the contemporary novel continues to incorporate the Bildungsroman ‘model’ in the unstructured and non-normative sense of the term, in many diversified but renewed ways, interlacing different experiences of self-formation that stem from intercultural, transnational and transhistorical dimensions, in the implicit awareness of the original transnational quality of the European 19th- century model? Modernist transformative narrative techniques also affected the idea of Bildung by breaking it up into an epiphanic aesthetics of flashes and moments of being, rather than a progressive assessment, thus radically undermining its socialised value. Has this modernist legacy loomed large over the twentieth century and early twenty-first century?

Finally, has the very notion of Bildung morphed into an irreversible dispersion and dissolution, or did it subsist and abide in other dialectical forms, engaging with the renewed interest of the contemporary novel in the historical past and with the question of the encounter with the other? How has the value of youth and – above all – of Bildung itself, changed after the great collective and generational traumas of twentieth-century history? How did a contemporary master like J.M.Coetzee renew the allegorical, cultural and even pedagogical dimensions of the Bildungsroman, fathoming the erosion of the authority of Bildung in the Jesus Trilogy?

The XXVIth issue of Prospero, A Journal of Foreign Literatures (2021) aims at attracting critical studies focusing on a twofold consideration of the Bildungsroman today: on the one hand new perspectives in the literary history of this genre, and on the other the current (and future) directions of its contemporary forms. Contributors are invited to analyse how recent critical and theoretical approaches – from feminism to gender studies, from postcolonialism and narratology, trauma studies, ecocriticism, to affect studies and posthumanism – have enriched and probed further into our understanding of the Bildungsroman from its origins to the mid-twentieth century, and how they may have contributed to substantiate and redefine the aesthetic shape and intellectual and cultural scope of contemporary forms of Bildungsroman.

What defines the notion of Bildung and a Bildungsroman today? Has this label become too loose and generic to preserve its critical value or can it be reinforced in its cultural significance in the light of recent literary history, and theory? All of these foundational questions should be taken into account and substantiate an array of possible topics that may include – but not be limited to – the following suggestions:

- British and German traditions of the Bildungsroman: dialogic transnational intertextualities.
- Nineteenth-century historical Bildungsromane.
- The impossibility of heroism, imperial Britain and the fin-de-siècle Bildungsroman.
- From national allegory to the failure of imperialism: narratives of arrested development and global uncertainty from Modernism to the present.
- The World Wars, trauma and Bildung.
- Bildung is belated: temporality and anachronism in the Modernist and Postmodernist Bildungsroman.
- ‘Mainstream’ fiction, seriality and the continuity of the Bildungsroman in young adult fiction.
- The endless appeal of the ‘canonical’ English Bildungsroman in rewritings, adaptations and remediations.
- Coming – of – age bodily narratives: embodied identities in the Bildungsroman.
- The posthuman as a reinvention of the Bildungsroman?
- The Bildungsroman and auto/biofiction from the origins to the present.
- Class divide in the contemporary Bildungsroman: a continuation of the British counter-model of classification?
- Allegory and the renewal of Bildung: J.M.Coetzee’s Jesus Trilogy.

Prospective contributors should submit an abstract of maximum 500 words and a short bio-note by May 2 to Roberta Gefter Wondrich, editor in chief of Prospero at gefter@units.it

Acceptance of proposals will be notified by May 25, and full papers in MLA style are required no later than October 1, 2021, in order to ensure publication by December 2021.

Articles will be sent to peer reviewers immediately after acceptance by the editor and returned to authors no later than November 15.

Inclusive Theatre-making: Translation, Accessibility and Beyond

Special issue of inTRALinea – www.intralinea.org

Guest edited by Elena Di Giovanni and Francesca Raffi

This special issue wishes to gather theoretical, methodological and empirical reflections on the notion of inclusive theatre-making, with ample space for interlingual, intralingual and intersemiotic translation to be discussed from an interdisciplinary perspective. Collaborative papers bringing together different standpoints and competencies are encouraged.

Since the rise of media accessibility studies within audiovisual translation, early into this new millennium, a constant growth of interdisciplinary projects and publications has been recorded, bearing witness to the relevance and potential of such a new research avenue. Many of these publications have focused on the audience(s) of accessible media and highlighted an all-important shift from accessibility for the sensory impaired to accessibility for all.

Theatre translation and accessibility have so far been the object of rather unsystematic research, generally limited to case studies and practice reports. Yet theatre, taken here to include all forms of live performance, is often referred to as been the cradle of accessibility for the sensory impaired (Tolan, 2001). It has welcomed experimental projects and, in many countries, it has anticipated cinema and other media into making access services a stable asset. Differently from other media, studies on theatre require true interdisciplinary competences even if they aim to remain generic: basic notions related to staging a show or an opera, as well as knowledge of the text and its origins, are essential when aiming to approach a theatrical performance from any scientific standpoint.

In recent years, two interesting trends in audiovisual translation and media accessibility research have emerged, in conjunction with the notions of accessible filmmaking and inclusion. As Pablo Romero states (2019), accessible filmmaking aims to raise awareness with film directors and distributors about the need for a film to be conceived of as accessible from the very onset. A film that is produced encompassing translation into multiple languages, audio description, intralingual captions and other such elements is bound to appeal to ever-larger audiences. The practice of accessible filmmaking also brings with itself the wish for an increasingly widespread awareness, on the part of film creators, distributors but also audiences, of the needs of diverse people and their right to inclusion. And it is precisely the notion of inclusion that has been coming to the fore in recent years: inspired by real-life experiences (Di Giovanni, 2018) or philosophical reasoning (Greco, 2019), a few researchers have been promoting a shift from the very notion of accessibility towards a more universal, inclusive conceptual framework, aiming to see all -creators, distributors and audiences – not just as equal consumers but also as active creators of all-accessible texts.

The notion of inclusive theatre-making moves precisely from these ideas and aims to stimulate interdisciplinary research which can lead to new theories, new methodologies and most importantly new practices.

This special issue wishes to gather theoretical, methodological and empirical reflections on the notion of inclusive theatre-making, with ample space for interlingual, intralingual and intersemiotic translation to be discussed from an interdisciplinary perspective. Collaborative papers bringing together different standpoints and competencies are encouraged.

A position paper providing a definition and discussion of the concept of accessible theatre-making will precede all the others.

Contributions can cover the following topics:

- Designing and staging inclusive performances: from theory to practice
- The turn towards diversity: disabled theatre, cultural policy and the translator
- Inclusive design at the service of theatre-making
- Theatre translation as an inclusive strategy
- Theatre and the public sphere
- Bridging the gap between operas and audiences through inclusion
- A bottom-up approach to inclusive theatre-making: designing principles from practice
- The political aesthetic of disabled embodiment
- From end users to producers: persons with sensory impairments and their changing role in inclusive theatre-making
- The role of technologies in enhancing inclusive theatre-making
- Inclusive theatre-making within the framework of human rights.

Journal of Literary, Postcolonial and Gender Studies

Transnational Subjects and Intercultural Identities: Travel and the Global South

Editors: Silvia Antosa ("Kore" University of Enna) and Elisabetta Marino (University of Rome "Tor Vergata")

For centuries, travel writing has opened up spatial and temporal gaps between different places, cultures and languages, often causing a sense of disorientation and destabilisation. As a narrative form, it has constantly challenged readers, and encouraged them to adopt new and different interpretative criteria. It cannot be easily subsumed under a single literary genre and cannot be ascribed to a univocal ideological or scientific classification. It changes form and language according to the cultural context and to the world(s) it describes. Travel writing adopts multiple languages and forms of representation and develops new perspectives on the world; readers are compelled to re-orient themselves in order to understand and imaginatively re-create the narrated world, or multiple worlds, to which they can – albeit temporarily – belong.

Historically, the "South" has been identified as a space with shifting and unstable borders, open to multiple forms of representation and reconfiguration. It has long been connected to the possibility of observing and experiencing new forms of encounter which could defy and challenge Western normative sociocultural frames and subvert notions of gender identity and heterosexual desire. Women have often perceived travelling as an emancipating experience, as an opportunity to free themselves from the strictures of social conventions. Hence, their letters from abroad and travel accounts have granted them the opportunity to acquire an authoritative voice even on topics beyond their (supposedly limited) areas of expertise, while enabling them to compare and contrast their own condition with that of their foreign counterparts. In their work, the South may become a transformative and performative space in which they can express and empower their own narrative voices. If historically women's travel writing has been consistently defined as more "confessional" (Foster 1990, 19) and “subjective” (McEwan 2000, 87), twentieth- and twenty-first-century women travellers redefine the intimate nature of their writing by reshaping the very form(s) they used. In a similar vein, by re-imagining the South as a space in which they could be freer to investigate their own sexuality and desires, queer individuals and sexual dissidents have also produced alternative narrative spaces by conflating existing textual forms in order to give a discursive shape to disruptive forms of identity.

More recently, textual representations have varied considerably in form and scope. By focusing on texts written between the beginning of the nineteenth century and the present day, this issue sets out to explore a multiplicity of written, visual, and intermedial texts by delving into writers’ experience of the Global South (in the widest sense of the term). It aims to show how they have grappled with issues of identity, difference, cross-cultural encounter(s), and belonging. In addition, it explores how the (de)construction of borders, social orders and strategies of control may be accompanied by a more nuanced, deeper understanding of the complex interconnections that link geographical and imagined spaces as well as identities.

Special emphasis will be placed on the experimental textual and intermedial strategies authors have employed to challenge ingrained ideas about the superiority of Western civilization, gender roles and prerogatives, sexual identities, and religion. A multiplicity of textual forms and experiences will be interrogated, such as travel accounts, diaries, letters, fictional narratives of real or imaginative journeys, travel blogs, Facebook and Instagram stories, as well as inter- and transmedial transpositions of texts etc. A comparative approach and a diachronic analysis highlighting elements of rupture and continuity with tradition are welcome.

Call for Papers – Themed Issue of Inverbis

Title: Recent Trends in Irish Theatre

Editor: Chiara Sciarrino

This issue explores recent trends in Irish theatre and theatre culture with a double aim of assessing and disseminating the work of playwrights, directors, companies, in Ireland and among the Irish diaspora. Special attention is given to 21st century Irish theatre and its sense of heritage, its sense of the present, its use of memory, the duty and challenges of recollection and theatre’s capacity for independent action.

Among topics we aim to focus on is the theme of “Partition”: on the one hand this entails reflections on the 1921–2021 centenary, and how Irish theatre rethinks and creates narratives of the Partition, how it partakes in the collective memory of that historical moment. Secondly, we will look into the Brexit, the way it impacts on Irish theatre, and how it is recounted through theatre. Thirdly, we welcome general reflections on how Irish theatre survives through these difficult times and how we ourselves read under our current circumstances of lockdowns, widespread mortality, and the resulting social and economic disruptions.

Contributions are invited on the following topics:

Irish contemporary playwrights

Irish drama and Brexit

Irish drama revisiting classics

Ageing in Irish Drama

Disability Theatre

Irish Drama and Irish Theatre in Pandemic Times

Irish drama and Irish history (papers on the theme of Partition will be appreciated)

Submission and deadlines

Proposals should be submitted to chiara.sciarrino@unipa.it by 31 March 2021.

Full papers should be sent to chiara.sciarrino@unipa.it by 21 July 2021.

FIGURATIVE MEANING CONSTRUCTION IN THOUGHT AND LANGUAGE

Annalisa Baicchi (ed.)

John Benjamins, 2020, pp. 311

ISBN: 9789027207050

Figurative language is derived from figurative thought, which in turn is the outcome of the interplay between our physical experience and the relation we set up with the cultural context we live in. Over the past thirty years, researchers from different scientific fields and theoretical persuasions have proved that human experience is conceptualised in figurative ways and communicated via figurative language. By bringing together usage-based theoretical research and empirical corpus-based studies on core issues of figurativeness, the volume offers a unique take on the complex interconnection between thought and language. Collectively, the twelve chapters delve into an array of topics that are crucial for future research in figurative meaning construction, in particular on questions of identification and structure of figures of speech, conceptual metonymy and metaphor, synaesthesia, the figurative motivation of morpho-syntactic constructions, the impact of figurativeness on pragmatic and multimodal communication, the pragmatic effects in irony and hyperbole, and the correlation between figures and cognitive models.

VERBAL AGGRESSION IN ENGLISH: A SPEECH ACT THEORY APPROACH

Stefania Biscetti

Collana InterLinguistica – Studi contrastivi tra Lingue e Culture, Edizioni ETS, 2020, pp. 126

ISBN: 9788846759566

This book represents the first attempt to provide a systematic theoretical account of verbal aggressiveness from a linguistic pragmatic perspective. It describes the (para)linguistic means used in English to be aggressive and combines social-psychological research on aggressive behaviour with the tenets of speech act theory and prototype theory to gain a deeper understanding of the phenomenon as distinct from impoliteness. By challenging current (anglocentric) views on aggressiveness that tend to equate it with impoliteness, this study opens up a new perspective on verbal aggressiveness as a phenomenon worth being investigated in its own right.

SHIFTING TOPOONYMIES. (RE)NAMING PLACES, (RE)SHAPING IDENTITIES

Luisa Caiazzo, I. M. Nick (eds)

Cambridge Scholars Publishing, 2020, pp. 236

ISBN: 1527560287

Far from being objective and static pointers, place-names are more often than not dynamic tools of inscription used to (re)shape both our surroundings and our identities. This book examines the complex relationship between identities, places, and toponyms to unveil the multilayered embeddedness of (re)naming practices.

The volume collects original contributions to this rich field of enquiry, and fosters a multidisciplinary approach in exploring the broad theme of (re)naming and identity. Ranging from theoretical issues to case studies and methodological reconsiderations, the chapters aim to investigate the often thorny relationship between toponyms and identity. As a privileged medium of expression, place-names constitute both an instrument and a vehicle for conveying identity, values, and visions of the world across space and time. The multifaceted issues tackled and the diverse methods adopted make the volume attractive not only to expert in the field but also to postgraduate students and researchers in a broad spectrum of disciplines, from onomastics and linguistics, to sociolinguistics, history, holocaust studies, postcolonial studies, and media studies.

DISCOURSES OF CYCLING, ROAD USERS AND SUSTAINABILITY: AN ECOLINGUISTIC INVESTIGATION

M. Cristina Caimotto

Palgrave Macmillan, 2020, pp.146

ISBN: 9783030440268

This book employs a Critical Discourse Studies (CDS) framework to examine cycling mobility, marking a new turn in ecolinguistic discourse analysis. The author focuses specifically on environment-related arguments concerning the promotion of higher levels of cycling, mainly as a means of transport, and investigates the "US vs. "THEM" narratives present in many discourses about road users. Analysing newspaper articles, institutional documents and spoken interviews, the author searches for a positive new discourse that would inspire and encourage cycling as a habitual means of transport, rather than simply exposing ecologically destructive discourse. Policies to promote cycling as a solution to the problems affecting life in cities are increasingly implemented, but the number of people who cycle does not grow as much as advocates would hope. By digging into issues of identity, sustainability, social conflict and drawing inspiration from Systems Thinking, this book offers insights into how the discourse of cycling can be a starting point for the creation of new ways of framing ecosystems, life and what "well-being" can mean.

RACCONTI D'AMORE AL TEMPO DELLA REGINA VITTORIA.LA BAIA DI MALACHI E ALTRE STORIE

Maria Teresa Chialant (a cura di)

Edizioni Scientifiche Italiane, 2020, pp. 205

ISBN: 978884953

I sei racconti di cui si propone la traduzione con testo originale a fronte sono stati pubblicati su riviste o in raccolte di short stories tra il 1864 e il 1896, anni in cui la narrativa breve conosce una stagione particolarmente felice in Inghilterra. Gli autori, Trollope, Collins e Kipling, sono nomi assai noti nel panorama letterario britannico; le autrici, Nora Vynne, George Egerton e Mary Angela Dickens, sono figure oggi meno conosciute ma popolari all'epoca, e altrettanto significative. L'amore romantico, o meglio, l'innamoramento è il motivo conduttore di queste storie che, da un lato, rimandano a comportamenti e costumi, pregiudizi e luoghi comuni diffusi nel periodo vittoriano relativamente ai rapporti tra i sessi; dall'altro, evidenziano le diverse emozioni che caratterizzano le relazioni sentimentali tra uomini e donne – aspettative, gioie e delusioni – che, seppur riferite agli ultimi decenni del diciannovesimo secolo, appaiono ancora oggi sorprendentemente attuali. Questi racconti, nei quali la vicenda sentimentale s'intreccia sempre con questioni di classe e/o di genere, offrono acute riflessioni sulla condizione femminile e l'aspirazione delle donne a una maggiore libertà individuale, e sul loro rapporto con lo spazio urbano o l'ambiente naturale che fa da sfondo alle vicende narrate.

ELLEN WOOD, CASA DANESBURY

Introduzione e note di Mariaconcetta Costantini

Traduzione di Mariaconcetta Costantini e Giorgia Paternostro

Edizioni Croce, 2020, pp. 415

ISBN: 9788864024141

Pubblicata a Londra nel 1860, Casa Danesbury, di cui si offre qui la prima traduzione italiana, è l'opera di esordio di Ellen Wood. Una saga familiare ambientata nell'Inghilterra di metà Ottocento, questo romanzo affronta la questione spinosa dell'alcolismo nel periodo in cui si sviluppa il Movimento della Temperanza. Pur inscrivendosi nel genere sociale vittoriano, Casa Danesbury mostra già elementi della scrittura sensazionale che più tardi caratterizzerà la prosa woodiana. Il volume, pubblicato dalle Edizioni Croce, inaugura un progetto di rivalutazione dell'opera di Ellen Wood in Italia.

BACK TO THE FUTURE. ENGLISH FROM PAST TO PRESENT

Maria Luisa Maggioni, Amanda Murphy (eds)

Peter Lang Group AG, Collana Linguistic Insights diretta da Maurizio Gotti, 2021, pp. 280

ISBN: 9783034342735

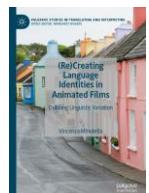

This edited book advocates an awareness of diachronic development at all levels of language in order to enhance the learning and teaching of language and translation. Written by expert or early stage scholars, each chapter illustrates some aspect of this approach, adopting a variety of research methodologies. The chapters explore the contribution of a diachronic perspective to the pedagogy of English spelling, translation studies, bilingual education, approaches to teaching Culture in CLIL, the development of a new multimodal genre – the lyrics video – and traces the development of vocabulary learning strategies in advanced students, aspects of modality in legal English, and the meaning shifts through time of the American lexeme dude. This book will be of interest to advanced level students, teachers and scholars of English.

(RE)CREATING LANGUAGE IDENTITIES IN ANIMATED FILMS. DUBBING LINGUISTIC VARIATION

Vincenza Minutella

Palgrave Studies in Translating and Interpreting, Palgrave Macmillan, 2020, pp. 408

ISBN: 9783030566371

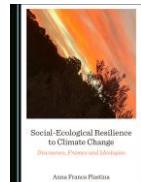

This book describes the dubbing process of English-language animated films produced by US companies in the 21st century, exploring how linguistic variation and multilingualism are used to create characters and identities and examining how Italian dubbing professionals deal with this linguistic characterisation. The analysis carried out relies on a diverse range of research tools: text analysis, corpus study and personal communications with dubbing practitioners. The book describes the dubbing workflow and dubbing strategies in Italy and seeks to identify recurrent patterns and therefore norms, as well as stereotypes or creativity in the way multilingualism and linguistic variation are tackled. It will be of interest to students and scholars of translation, linguistic variation, film and media.

SOCIAL-ECOLOGICAL RESILIENCE TO CLIMATE CHANGE: DISCOURSES, FRAMES AND IDEOLOGIES

Anna Franca Plastina

Cambridge Scholars Publishing, 2020, pp. 210

ISBN: 9781527559578

This volume represents a timely response for the provision of fresh insight into the evolution of climate change communication. Through the case study method, it investigates the representation of social-ecological resilience to climate change in the emerging discursive practice mediated online by grassroots activists. The fertile ground of resilience discourse is explored by showing its more positive outlook compared to the varieties of climate change discourse competing in the ongoing climate debate. Significant varieties are examined to highlight their background role in the discourse formation of social-ecological resilience. The discursive-frame approach proposed offers more than one methodological lens, allowing to capture the interrelated discursive, cognitive and social dimensions of resilience. It thereby underlines the importance of integrating different strands of critical discourse analysis with frame analysis to attend to the sociocognitive dimension of discourse which is still largely overlooked. The book is suitable for adoption amongst a wide readership, including scholars and neophyte readers with an interest in discourse, media and cultural studies, ecolinguistics, sociolinguistics, cognitive linguistics and pragmatics.

CORPI MAGICI. SCRITTURE INCARNATE DAL FANTASTICO ALLA FANTASCienza

Anna Pasolini e Nicoletta Vallorani

Milano, Mimesis (Collana DeGenere), 2020, pp. 198

ISBN: 9788857571393

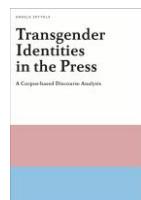

Il volume risulta da un percorso di ricerca sulla rappresentazione del corpo femminile in generi narrativi specifici e con un riferimento esplicito alla contemporaneità. Coniugando Gender Studies, Postcolonial Studies e la consapevolezza metodologica delle risorse dei Cultural Studies in ambito letterario, le autrici esplorano i territori contigui del fantastico e della fantascienza partendo dall'assunto che "Le storie hanno un loro preciso punto di innesco nella realtà, e le storie delle donne [...] seguono percorsi che con l'etica eroica dei padri non hanno nulla a che fare". Le sei scrittrici scelte (A. Carter, J. Winterson, B. Evaristo, J. Tiptree Jr, O. Butler e N. K. Jemisin) rappresentano tutte svolte importanti nella letteratura femminista ed esibiscono una qualità stilistica innegabile accanto a un'altissima consapevolezza del ruolo e delle responsabilità del racconto letterario nella comunità. Seguendo i loro passi, le autrici del saggio cercano di indovinare un bandolo che possa mettere in connessione tessiture narrative diverse, intrecciando generi parenti, ma non sempre facili da combinare.

TRANSGENDER IDENTITIES IN THE PRESS: A CORPUS-BASED DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

Angela Zottola

Bloomsbury, 2021 pp. 224

ISBN: 9781350097544

For many people, newspapers are a key source of information on many topics, including issues related to gender and sexuality. Applying a broad range of corpus linguistic methods, Transgender Identities in the Press critically explores the linguistic cues and patterns used by the print media in their representation of trans people. Through close analysis of a corpus of articles collected from English-language newspapers from the UK and Canada, the study focuses on the semantic categories of representation associated with transgender identities. The book explores the semantic prosody and language choices that each term is invested with, using Critical Discourse Analysis to investigate how the way the press represents this topic influences readers and their understanding of the major debates.

Using a mixture of quantitative and qualitative methods, Transgender Identities in the Press casts light on the complex picture of press language during a period of social change and increasing awareness. Highlighting both efforts to represent this community in an inclusive and non-discriminatory way and areas where there is need for improvement, this book illustrates a variety of issues from a critical and social perspective.

Convegni, seminari, workshop: brevi report

Generi di confine: attraversamenti, scritture, culture // Bordering Genders/Genres/Genera: Crossings, Writings, Cultures

Il giorno 26 marzo 2021 si è tenuta sulla piattaforma Microsoft Teams la conferenza internazionale Generi di confine: attraversamenti, scritture, culture // Bordering Genders/Genres/Genera: Crossings, Writings, Cultures, organizzata dal Dipartimento di Lingue, Letterature e Culture Moderne dell'Università degli Studi "G. d'Annunzio" Chieti-Pescara in collaborazione con l'Università di Enna "Kore". L'evento, incentrato su questioni come l'attraversamento dei confini fisici e astratti nell'ambito della geo-politica, dell'identità e della rappresentazione in letteratura, nelle arti figurative e sullo schermo, è stato organizzato da Silvia Antosa, Mariaconcetta Costantini e Mara Mattoscio, e ha coinvolto relatrici provenienti da Italia, Francia, Regno Unito, Olanda e Svizzera.

La prima parte dell'incontro, caratterizzata dalle relazioni di Paola Zaccaria, Giulia De Spuches, Lorena Carbonara e Christine Quinan, ha considerato la questione dei confini e della permeabilità del corpo, con particolare attenzione a figure di terra e di acqua nell'ambito del post-colonialismo. Si è anche discusso del rovesciamento dell'atto del vedere operato dalla fotografa Zanele Muholi, dell'uso dell'artivism come strumento di denuncia di forme oppressive rappresentate dal muro tra Messico e Stati Uniti, dei nuovi ostacoli identitari posti dalle tecnologie biometriche impiegate in aeroporti e altre zone di confine.

Nell'ambito della letteratura e del desiderio analizzati in prospettiva transnazionale, Carmen Concilio, Silvia Antosa e Megan MacDonald si sono confrontate rispettivamente sulla rappresentazione dell'anzianità nella serie di romanzi canadesi Jalna; sul desiderio omoerotico femminile espresso in romanzi inglesi, francesi e italiani degli anni Venti; sulla diaspora e la questione algerina nel film del 2011 Monsieur Lazhar.

La terza parte dell'incontro, in cui sono intervenute Marie Mulvey-Roberts, Claudia Capancioni e Mara Mattoscio, ha delineato la questione dei confini razziali e di genere nella letteratura britannica contemporanea. Assieme al romanzo Trumpet di Jackie Kay, che narra l'esperienza transgender del/la musicista jazz Billy Tipton, si è parlato della poetica di Ali Smith, incentrata sulla fluidità di genere inteso come gender and genre, e della complessità dei confini narrativi e razziali che emerge in The Embassy of Cambodia di Zadie Smith.

Infine, ponendo l'attenzione sull'attraversamento di genere e sul corpo nelle sue molteplici implicazioni, Anita Trivelli, Chiara Scarlato e Alessandra Di Pietro hanno fornito un'analisi della rappresentazione femminile nei film della cineasta neozelandese Jane Campion, del superamento dei confini corporei nella rappresentazione letteraria, e del potere performativo della letteratura evidente nel romanzo di Akwaeke Emezi, Freshwater.

Il convegno, patrocinato dal CUG di Ateneo, AISCLI e PSA, ha visto un'ampia partecipazione di pubblico ed è stato seguito da studenti e docenti di vari atenei.

Il tema di questa edizione è 'Infection' and 'Toxicity' in Early Modern Literature and Culture: si esploreranno i modi in cui nozioni di 'infezione' e 'tossicità' operano a livello materiale e simbolico nella produzione linguistica, letteraria e culturale della prima modernità. I lavori saranno introdotti da Simon Gammell, Direttore del British Institute of Florence e da Giuliana Iannaccaro, Presidente di IASEMS. Le sessioni saranno aperte da due conferenze plenarie tenute da Laura Tosi (Università di Venezia Ca' Foscari) e da Laura Pinnavaia (Università di Milano). Vi aspettiamo!

We strongly believe that the goal of COMET 2021 is to foster a scholarly network despite the global pandemic that keeps us physically apart.

The COMET conference aims to bring together scholars from different disciplinary backgrounds involving various healthcare specialties and the human and social sciences. A special emphasis is on the dissemination of ongoing research in language / discourse / communication studies in relation to healthcare education, patient participation and professional ethics.

COMET 2021 will feature the following plenary speakers:

- Richard Ashcroft (City, University of London, UK)
- Jerome Groopman and Pamela Hartzband (Harvard Medical School, USA)
- Lorelei Lingard (Western University, Canada)

Lo sguardo delle viaggiatrici sull'Italia di mezzo. Un progetto fotografico

Il progetto "L'Abruzzo delle viaggiatrici" finanziato dal Dipartimento di Scienze Umane (UNIVAQ) intende coinvolgere cinque tra fotografe e fotografi per realizzare altrettanti racconti fotografici che riscrivano i luoghi e le comunità che sono state attraversate dalle autrici su cui si concentra il progetto, tra cui Margaret Fuller, Estella Canziani, Amy Atkinson e Anne MacDonnell (1920-1996), con l'obiettivo di far dialogare le rappresentazioni testuali e figurative lasciateci dalle viaggiatrici con gli scenari del presente catturati dalla fotografia.

SAM – SHAKESPEARE AND THE MEDITERRANEAN INTERNATIONAL SUMMER SCHOOL IN VERONA – ROMEO AND JULIET

University of Verona, July 27 – August 3, 2021

<https://skene.dlls.univr.it/en/sam-shakespeare-summer-school-in-verona/>

Since classical antiquity, the Mediterranean has been a breeding ground for cultural formation and transformation, extraordinarily capitalised on by Shakespeare, who set many of his plays there, re-elaborating narratives, cultural models, theatregrams, epistemological perspectives, and visual and material art forms. In turn, Italy and the other Mediterranean cultures are nowadays responding to the aesthetic and cultural stimuli of those plays, with ever new interpretations and reinterpretations.

SaM Summer School will approach Shakespeare and the Mediterranean from a double perspective that integrates source studies and performance studies: from the Mediterranean sources of Shakespeare to Shakespeare as a source of new adaptations and rewritings in the heart of the Mediterranean. This first edition will concentrate on Romeo and Juliet in a Mediterranean context.

The Summer School is open to university students, teachers, and performers. Participants will be able to attend either on site or remotely. Participants will be divided into two groups:

- 1) Master's and Doctoral students, as well as schoolteachers (Group A).
- 2) Acting School students and graduates as well as performers (Group B).

The course is organised as a cycle of lectures and workshops, offered in 'blended' mode, over a week.

Students in Group A will be provided with reading materials by June 28, 2021. A test on this material will be held on July 27, 2021. End-of-course essays will be due by August 13, 2021.

The Summer School will admit up to 50 participants (25 for Group A and 25 for Group B).

Classes will be held in English (Group A) and Italian and English (Group B). Minimum attendance: 80%

Applications are now open and will close on June 4, 2021.

Admitted candidates will be notified by June 11, 2021 and the deadline for the tuition fee is June 18, 2021.
